Chatswood Hills State School's official opening of new multipurpose hall

Member for Rankin Craig Emerson officially opened Chatswood State School's new school multipurpose hall and new library with students, faculty and parents looking on.

Mr Emerson said, 'Chatswood Hills State School is a quiet achiever in the local community whose staff and students will benefit from the new buildings.'

The new library has a state of the art computer lab which will mean more room for more students to participate in computer studies while the new multipurpose hall has made a big difference to students rainy day activities.

'These new buildings give the school the opportunity to expand learning areas which in turn offers students the ability to learn in more quiet areas or be loud when the need arises.'

The Multipurpose Hall has been designed with natural ventilation and should be a welcome addition to the school and the local community who can access it for local events.
